Iraq: United Nations and Humanitarian Aid Organizations

Summary

The war with Iraq, which began on March 19, 2003, has now moved into a new phase as a result of coalition forces controlling all of the major cities in Iraq and the end of the Iraqi political and military leadership. Currently, the main focus is the reconstruction of Iraq, providing humanitarian assistance, and establishing a new interim government. The United Nations (U.N.) and other international aid organizations, including nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), are coordinating and providing humanitarian assistance to the Iraqi people, and the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA), headed by the new chief civil administrator in Iraq L. Paul Bremer III, is responsible for the administration and humanitarian efforts in Iraq.

This report provides an annotated list of U.N. agencies that currently have programs in Iraq, key U.S. government agencies, and a sample list of major international and U.S.-based aid organizations that are providing humanitarian assistance to Iraq. Internet links of the U.N. agencies and humanitarian aid organizations are also provided. For detailed discussion on humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in Iraq, see CRS Report RL31833, Iraq: Recent Developments in Humanitarian and Reconstruction Assistance, and CRS Report RL31814, Humanitarian Issues in Post-War Iraq: An Overview for Congress. This report will be updated as events warrant.

Iraq: United Nations and Humanitarian Aid Organizations

Introduction

The war with Iraq, which began on March 19, 2003, has now moved into a new phase as a result of coalition forces controlling all of the major cities in Iraq and the end of the Iraqi political and military leadership.¹ Currently, the United Nations (U.N.) and international aid organizations such as the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), including nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), are coordinating and providing humanitarian assistance to the Iraqi people, and the U.N. World Food Programme (WFP) is delivering thousands of tons of food to the people of Iraq as part of its $1.5 billion bid to feed the entire Iraqi population through October 2003.²

Former diplomat L Paul Bremer, appointed by the President on May 6, 2003, is the chief civil administrator in Iraq. He also heads the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA), which is responsible for the administration of and humanitarian efforts in Iraq.³ According to news sources, Mr. Bremer has appointed a 25-member Iraqi “governing council” that will have control over some former government ministries, which will be the first step toward handing authority over to a new Iraqi government.⁴

Also, the U.N. Security Council, on May 22, 2003, voted on Resolution 1483 to lift the economic sanctions against Iraq and granted the United States and United Kingdom authority to run Iraq until a new government is established.⁵ The Resolution also authorizes U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan to appoint a special representative to Iraq who will coordinate humanitarian assistance and reconstruction efforts. Sergio Vieira de Mello, a Brazilian diplomat and the current U.N. High
